FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

‘Redefining Possible’ Art Exhibit at Denver International Airport Seeks to Change Perceptions

DENVER — Nov. 24, 2015 — Redefining Possible is a groundbreaking new temporary art exhibit at Denver International Airport (DEN) featuring portraits of 12 people who are living with spinal cord or brain injuries, as photographed by Pulitzer Prize-winning photographer Barry Gutierrez.

Located in the Jeppesen Terminal display cases at the southeast end of Level 5 near baggage claim, the exhibition is scheduled through February 2016.

Craig Hospital and Barry Gutierrez created the Redefining Possible portrait series to showcase the power of the human spirit. The innovative portrait series features 12 people who have made remarkable strides after a catastrophic injury or illness.

About DEN's Art and Culture Program

DEN's Art and Culture Program administers the City and County of Denver's "one percent for art" ordinance which enhances public places and features nearly 30 site-specific works including sculptures, murals and other installations. The pieces are displayed in outdoor landscapes, inside Jeppesen Terminal and on airport concourses, as well as in the train tunnels and on the train itself. In addition to its permanent art collection, DIA curates temporary exhibitions, collaborating with museums, cultural institutions and arts organizations to present the highest quality two- and three-dimensional work. For more information, visit www.flydenver.com/art.

DEN has been named "Best U.S. Airport for Art" in USA Today's "10Best Reader's Choice" travel contest in 2013. The category focuses on how airports have been transforming from utilitarian hubs of transport to spaces with beautiful works of art, great restaurants, comfy lounges and terrific shopping. DEN was selected by readers as the favorite among 20 airports nominated by the publication.
